

The figure displays a 13x13 grid of hexagonal patterns. Each pattern consists of black dots arranged on a white hexagonal grid. The patterns vary significantly across the grid, showing different symmetries, sizes, and arrangements of dots. Some patterns are simple, like a single dot or a small cluster, while others are more complex, forming larger shapes or intricate clusters. The overall arrangement suggests a systematic exploration of possible dot configurations within a hexagonal lattice.